Sarthak
Rare Genetic
Disorder

Help 4 months Sarthak in his battle against a rare genetic disorder

"We were trying to have a child for a long time but we could not conceive normally so we decided to take help of In Vitro Fertilization (IVF). After 6 years we finally conceived and we had our precious little baby boy. When we saw him in pain for the first time, we had lost all our hopes. We have only been running from one hospital to another. I feel so helpless."-

Anup Kumar Das ; (Father)

Sarthak Das is a four-months-old baby of Mr. Anup Kumar Das and Mrs. Soma Das. They hail from Jamtara, Jharkhand. The father works as an CISF (Central Industrial Security Force) constable and single handedly takes care of his joint family. One fine day, the father saw that Sarthak was shivering and having seizures and they immediately rushed him to the nearest hospital. After undergoing several tests, he was diagnosed with Primary Hyperoxaluria. It is a rare genetic condition present at birth. In simple terms, the liver does not create certain proteins and stops functioning. If left untreated, it spreads its malfunctioning effect on other organs of the body.

Initially at Apollo Hospital in Kolkata, the patient was kept under dialysis till any further proposal of intervention was recommended. The parents took a personal loan of Rs. 14,32,000/- to bear the costs. Sarthak is now in need of a liver transplant. He is admitted at the Rela Hospital, Chennai. The estimated cost of the current treatment is Rs 22,00,000/- (Rupees Twenty Two Lakhs only). The parents have no means left to meet this financial requirement. They need your support to help their ailing child.

Sarthak is in a critical condition where his body is unable to respond to natural urges. His treatment journey is longer than just a liver transplant. He will also need to undergo a kidney transplant as he grows older. Be a small part of helping him have a normal life ahead.

There are many more children who need urgent treatments, and your small contributions can make a huge difference. Please Donate!

How Adopting a Child Creates a Better Family

Adoption can be defined in various ways through different perspectives. Most simply put, adoption is a legal process in which the rights and responsibilities of a child are transferred from biological parents to the adoptive parents. It is a means to create a family, provide safety, love, care and material needs to someone. You may adopt someone who does not have a parent or someone whose parents are incapable of taking care of their child. In any of the conditions, adoption is about the welfare of the child in the picture.

In the process of adoption, every person involved faces challenges. But the most unstable ones are those faced by the child himself/herself. They have a lot of dilemmas in their mind which needs to be dealt with patiently. The new parent child relationship requires delicate nurturing and persistent efforts in helping the child bond, build trust and adapt to a new home environment. Adoption makes families go through a long process of acceptance but it is all worth it.

Reasons to Consider Adoption:

1. To create a progressive family

Every human needs to bond with other humans to survive. We are all a part of the global family where humanitarian connection is the most supreme. However, a close knit connection only exists between a few people which we call our family. When we talk about family, we relate the conditions of sharing the same genes, blood, DNA and last names. We associate creating a family with giving birth to our own child. However, Family is not about the biological bond, but about who shares a home and stays with us at good and bad times. Creating a family through adoption is one of the best ways to do it.

2. For the Social Good

World is a beautiful place but the circumstances are differently difficult for each one of us. Together, we are better able to face them. As members of the society, we all want to give back in some way. Charity is one of the options that helps so many underprivileged kids every day. However, it is one sided. Adopting someone and building a relationship is a two way street that does good for both the persons involved. Eventually, making society a better place.

3. Better use of your resources

Some of us are conventionally successful but are lonely inside. Some do not even have the resources to source meals for a day. The economic divide in any country is unfairly distributed. Maintaining equity in such a scenario is difficult. However, as sensible citizens, we can always choose to put our resources to better use and help someone in need. It also serves our emotional need of being there for someone and having them for ourselves.

4. Witness selfless love for a child

Children make one's world shine. They bring the best out of us. That's why Indian families stress on bearing children. But adopting a child and loving them selflessly is a different feeling that amplifies any home environment. Each member of the family learns and practices the art of sharing selflessly.

"Adding a new member and going through ups and downs of bonding creates a family stronger than any other."
